Come Work for Justice in Your Community! Department of Juvenile Justice Wants New Recruits For Careers in Corrections

Atlanta, Decatur, Milledgeville & Washington

(STATEWIDE-GA) Are you ready to work for justice in your community? The Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) is recruiting responsible adults like you who care about at-risk kids from around Georgia. Commissioner Avery D. Niles stated, "If you have corrections experience, DJJ wants you. And if you're a candidate who needs corrections training, DJJ will teach you."

Commissioner Niles said it takes a well-trained and well-disciplined individual to be the kind of Juvenile Correctional Officer (JCO) who can make a positive difference in the lives of incarcerated youth. DJJ will help qualified candidates find the career – positive positions they've been looking for here, in one of Georgia's most rewarding criminal justice career areas.

"At our youth development centers and campuses and in our communities, we help young offenders change their lives for the better, so we recruit a diverse and inclusive workforce," explained Niles. "We rely upon the unique life experiences and individual problem-solving abilities of our team of capable professionals to change young lives at DJJ every day."

The Commissioner has authorized agency recruiters to offer competitive starting salaries, military incentives, and comprehensive employee health and benefit packages for JCO positions. DJJ runs its own certified state academy where a rigorous training program is provided for recruits. The agency pays a salary increase at six months and a salary increase with promotion at one year. DJJ also supports the professional growth of new JCOs by offering career development training and opportunities.

"We're always looking for high-performance applicants who can adapt their past experience from military, law enforcement or adult correctional backgrounds to apply in a structured juvenile justice environment," the Commissioner said. "Our team members accept a personal challenge to help these young people embrace better decision-making to change their offending behaviors and prepare them to go home and build successful futures in their communities."

ABOUT DJJ

The Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) is a multi-faceted agency that serves the needs of this state's young offenders up to the age of 21. The Department employs more than 4,000 men and women at 26 secure facilities and 97 community services offices throughout the state to effect justice and redirect the young lives in the agency's care.

Including those who are placed on probation, thousands of youths are diverted each year to evidence-based community programs, sentenced to short-term incarceration or committed to the Department's long-term custody by the Juvenile Courts. It is the duty of DJJ's professional corrections staff to preserve public safety and safeguard the citizens of Georgia, as well as protect the victims of crimes so that they can rebuild their lives.

At the same time, DJJ holds juvenile offenders accountable for their delinquent conduct so that they can take responsibility for their actions through probation, supervision and secure detention. The youth are provided with medical and psychological treatment, as well as specialized education and programs designed to equip them with the social, intellectual and emotional tools needed to achieve their successful reentry and reintegration into community, workplace and neighborhood settings as more productive and law-abiding citizens.
